Zoom Language Feature

Amid significant social changes and transformations, such as the arrival of a global knowledge-based society, the shift to the fourth industrial revolution, and a declining population, the role of local universities is being re-examined. At the second open seminar, the preliminary findings of the institutional case studies in Japan, Korea, and Taiwan are discussed. The presenters examine how and why the selected local universities are engaging in internationalization from the point of view of local/regional revitalization.
